

HISTORY OF ROYAL EXCHANGE

It was in 1565 that Thomas Gresham, a well-travelled merchant, awarded with the title of knight, offered to build the City of London a bourse at his own expense if the land was provided. The City welcomed the offer and by 1566 the present site was cleared and the work begun. The resulting building was adorned with the Gresham family crest of a grasshopper and was opened by Queen Elizabeth I and was to survive until 1666, when the Great Fire of London swept it away.

The Great Fire not only destroyed the buildings, it destroyed morale too. It was swiftly decided to rebuild as much as possible of the City, and particularly the Royal Exchange, better than ever. King Charles II was so interested in the project that he agreed to lay the foundation stone himself.

In the late 18th century, traditional shops and shopping drifted westwards therefore business came in to fill the space. Among the first was Royal Exchange Assurance and in 1774, Lloyd's also moved to the building and were the unwilling cause of the building's second destruction by fire in 1838.

Rebuilding began almost immediately and a young Queen Victoria, in a great and lavish ceremony that underlined Royal Exchange's importance to the city, opened it again in 1844. Trading resumed in earnest and in 1882 twenty-four large panels of art around the ambulatory depicting the history of the City of London and the Royal Exchange were installed.

With the outbreak of the Second World War, trading at Royal Exchange virtually ended. However, the building survived the bombing and in 2001 the buildings was again extensively and sympathetically remodelled and became home to many of the world's finest merchants. Finally, in 2003, the Grand Café and Bar was opened, completing this magnificent building and offering a welcome retreat and an oasis of calm in the heart of the City.

COCKTAILS

Edward L'Anson's first important building in the City was the Royal Exchange Buildings, designed for Sir Francis Graham Moon in 1837. There he made use of concrete for the internal works, an early example of this modern construction method that had previously only been used in experimental or minor projects. This brought him into repute, and obtained for him the chief practice as architect in the City.

L'Anson developed a career as a pioneering designer of purpose-built commercial buildings in the City.

Edward L'Anson lived during the Victorian era which coincides with the pioneer of the bar, Jerry Thomas. For the Signature cocktails we take inspiration from the "Bar-tenders Guide" by Jerry Thomas and have made them with the same innovative vision that Edward L'Anson had when he designed this stunning building.
